1. The International Day of Happiness

On March 28, the high school joined Live Happy and happy activists all over the world as we celebrated the fifth annual International Day of Happiness by hosting a Happiness Wall during lunch periods and during the District concert. People filled out notes of how they would share happiness and displayed them on our school happiness wall. All participants received a Live Happy bracelet. In addition, all month long, we shared ideas, stories, and videos on how people could spread acts of kindness, compassion and love with friends, neighbors, community members, and co-workers. The club Speak Out led the way and facilitated two presentations at Forum to the entire school body; they also suggested happy acts on the daily announcements throughout March. They also shared results from research through a nonprofit group that partners with the U.N. that found genetics and upbringing influence about 50% of personal happiness, and that we all are actually born with a "happiness set point." 40% of our happiness is determined by our daily activities and the last 10% is from a variety of other things. The goal across the nation this year was to have 500 Happiness Walls to celebrate this day. This goal was surpassed with over 700 registered walls. Be sure to read the article about the event on the District website http://www.nrwcs.org or go to happyacts.org to learn more.
