Back to School

by Marilyn Capawan, Superintendent

Our EXCEL Capital Project is now underway! At a special meeting of the Board of Education on July 15th, construction contracts were awarded to the following companies: Ackerman Plumbing, Inc. for plumbing work; Connors-Hass, Inc. for electric work; Crosby-Brownlie, Inc. for heating work; Joseph Flihan Co. for food service equipment work; Manning Squires Hennig for general work; and Spring Sheet Metal and Roofing for roofing work. The contracts have been signed, and a “kickoff meeting” held between the contractors, our Construction Manager Kircher Construction, Inc., and representatives of the school. We will keep everyone informed about the construction schedule as details become available. In early fall, we plan to host a community forum to provide an overview of the project and what to expect while the work is underway.

Work has already begun at the Dalton Elementary School and is moving along quickly. We are reconfiguring the parent drop off area in front of the school in order to make it safer for children and parents alike. We anticipate that the work will be completed well before the winter is here, so that students being picked up from and dropped off at the building in inclement weather, when traffic has traditionally been an issue, will benefit from these changes. In order to minimize any disruption that might occur during the first days of school, we will be sending letters home to parents of Elementary students to explain the details of arrangements made to accommodate the safe arrival and departure of the children. We have included a picture of the proposed changes, and there will be a poster on display in the Dalton building as well.

Dalton Elementary School

The mission of the Keshequa Central School District is to provide opportunities to empower all students to be cooperative, self-directed lifelong learners, prepared to responsibly meet the challenges of the twenty-first century.

NYS Air and Space Hall of Fame Launched with Help of Students

Collaborating with members of the Air Force Association, the Aerospace Education Foundation, and the 1941 Historical Aircraft Group Museum, KCS students built the online New York State Air and Space Hall of Fame. The website features New Yorkers who made significant contributions to either air or space. Students researched different individuals ranging from military personnel to inventors and from manufacturing moguls to astronauts.

This year's inductees into the "Air Hall" included: Glenn Curtiss, Tsgt Forrest L. Vosler and the Tuskegee Airmen. Curtiss was born in Hammondsport and went on to become a famous inventor and aircraft manufacturer. Tsgt Forrest L. Vosler was born in Lyndonville, became a World War II Military hero and a Medal of Honor winner. Members of the Tuskegee Airmen from across the state made up the elite group of segregated black pilots whose introduction into WWII helped transform not only the war on foreign soil, but also helped heal some of the racial divide at home.

Inducted into the "Space Hall" this year were astronauts Edward Gibson, Charles Fullerton, and Robert Gibson. Edward Gibson was born in Buffalo and became an intricate part of testing for NASA on the Skylab space station. Charles Fullerton was born in Rochester and spent his career in the Air Force and flew multiple missions for NASA. Robert "Hoot" Gibson of Cooperstown left Earth several times, spending more than 36 days in space.

Senior Adam Green served as the chief webpage designer for the Hall of Fame and completed the site as a final project for Shawn Bielicki's advanced webpage design course. The project was funded by a mini-grant from the Rochester Area Community Foundation and was conducted as an enrichment activity. To visit the New York State Air and Space Hall of Fame log on to the internet at www.NY-SAirandSpace.org.

Adam Green works on updating the website for the NYS Air and Space Hall of Fame.

Seeds in Space

Deeper space exploration may one day require an additional stop for food...on the moon. With that in mind, NASA launched Space Shuttle Endeavor last fall carrying two educational payloads on mission STS-118: collapsible plant growth chambers to conduct 20-day plant germination and millions of cinnamon basil seeds. Inspired by the mission, career and financial management students obtained some of these seeds from NASA and, as an enrichment project, conducted an engineering design challenge and experiment. Using disposable baking trays with clear plastic lids, students created two lunar plant growth chambers and planted the space flown seeds in one and some Earth-based seeds as a control group in the other. Students learned the effects that outer space conditions have on living seeds. The project concluded with a module titled "Careers in Aerospace Technology" and highlighted the course's theme of finding traditional careers in non-traditional places.

Speaking of changes, you will notice that shrubbery in front of both the Dalton and Nunda buildings is being removed. This is to comply with the guidelines and protocols provided by the NYS Department of Education stating that shrubbery must be no higher than two feet for building safety and security. We will be replacing the shrubs with plantings that will promote safety while providing an attractive landscape.

We are proud to announce the appointment of our new Elementary Principal, Ami Hunt. Ami joins us from Canasarega where she has served in both teaching and leadership roles. You will learn more about Ms. Hunt in an upcoming article, where we will also introduce you to others who have joined the KCS team over the summer.

The beginning of another school year is the beginning of more opportunities for each of us to make a positive difference in the lives of our students. The celebrations of June may be over, but the excitement and possibilities that September brings are just as noteworthy. We look forward to continuing our partnership with the community in pursuit of excellence in our school!

KCS Bus Driver Wins Employee of the Year

Keshequa bus driver William Lissow was honored at the Annual Professional Pupil Transportation Employee of the Year Awards Brunch this spring. The event was sponsored by the Rochester Area Transportation Supervisors Association. The brunch, which took place at the Wishing Well Restaurant in Rochester, brought out Rochester Mayor Bob Duffy, who was the keynote speaker. An employee from each participating school district was honored.

A History Lesson

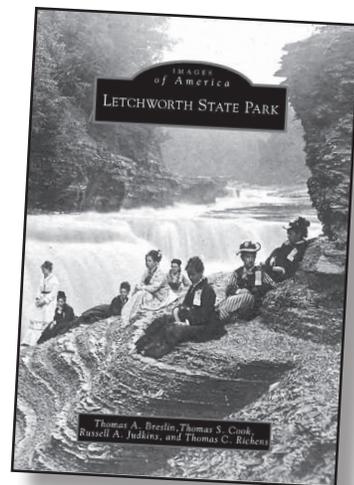

Newly retired Social Studies teacher Tom Cook has penned his own book on the history of Letchworth State Park. Cook along with Thomas Breslin, Russell Judkins, and Thomas Richens, co-authored Images of America: Letchworth State Park. The book discusses the history of the falls, Glen Iris, the Council Grounds, the Lower Falls, Wolf Creek, the Highbanks and the modern park through 200 images.

Cook said if visitors know the history of the park beforehand, it will add to the enjoyment of their visit.

"The history of the park or any area is part of the experience," said Cook.

Cook created and worked in the history department in the park from 1978 to 1992. He and Breslin created and maintain the website, www.Letchworthparkhistory.com. They were approached by Judkins and Richens to write the book. The book is available in Letchworth State Park as well as Amazon.com and Barnes and Noble.

KCS Student Attends Math and Science Camps

Keshequa student Alison Steidle is one of the 45 students from the Rochester area chosen to attend summer camps as part of New York State Excelsior Scholars Program. Students who completed the summer program, funded by a grant from the New York State Department of Education, will be named Excelsior Scholars by Governor David Paterson.

New York State Excelsior Scholars are students who have completed seventh grade, maintained a GPA of 90% or above in math and science in grades 5-7 and scored a level four in state exams in math in grades 5-6. Students had to fill out applications and also collect teacher recommendations. A committee of administrators reviewed the applications and chose one student to nominate.

Students attended one or both of the weeklong camps, The Biotechnology Experience and/or Microelectronics Engineering camp. Each week provided students with hands-on explorations, activities, and experiments that helped them enhance their understanding of career pathways in math and science. Alison attended the Microelectronics Engineering camp at the NYS Infotonics Center of Excellence in Canandaigua and Rochester Institute of Technology.

The Excelsior Scholars grant application was initiated by the Rochester Area Colleges Center for Excellence in Math and Science (RAC-CEMS). RAC-CEMS coordinated this grant proposal with the RIT Center for Biotechnology Education and Training; the RIT Department of Microelectronics Engineering; and the Infotonics Technology Center. Student nominations were solicited from 25 school districts in a six-county area.

Local Writer's 'Memories' Benefit Students

When writing her book, Memories of a One Room School House, retired KCS librarian Hope Stapley Depuy wanted nothing more than to share with younger generations what life was like at District 4 in Geneseo during the 1930s and Great Depression.

"I tried to share my life just like when I was a teacher," said Depuy.

Depuy made a visit to KCS in May, where she worked from 1945 until she retired in 1981, to present a classroom set of her books to Social Studies teacher Tom Cook and High School Librarian Lydia Keough. The books will be used in the Social Studies and History classes when they study the era of the Great Depression. Cook assisted Depuy in the editing process and getting the book published. He said the book is unique because it tells a story about this area.

"It provides a first person view of a time period," said Cook.

The book was published last year by the Nunda Historical Hope Stapley Depuy poses with HS Librarian Lydia Keough and newly retired Social Studies teacher Tom Cook.

Society in honor of the Nunda Bicentennial. Depuy began writing the book three years ago after being prompted by former student Valerie Griffing.

In the book, Depuy describes life in the country and living on a farm. She discusses day-to-day activities at school and home and how the hard economic times affected families. She also goes in-depth about the schoolhouse situated at the corner of Groveland and Jones

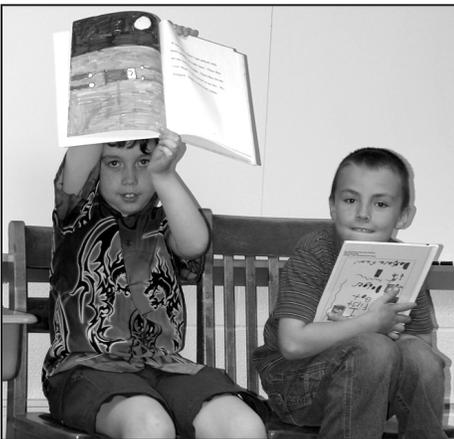

Bridge Roads in Geneseo and the surrounding land.

"It portrays farm life, ordinary peoples' lives as they were during the deep Depression," said Depuy. "It's a time that will never come again. It portrays life outside the village."

Some of Depuy's favorite memories were family closeness, eating meals together, and sharing everything. She said writing the book was like, "letting someone into your home." She said she had to let go of some of her privacy, but in a positive way.

"It (the book) is a treasure," said Depuy. "It's very precious to me. It's meaningful. It really touches my heart."

Third Graders Become Young Authors

Not everyone gets the opportunity to become a bona fide author by third grade, but third graders added "published author" to their lists of achievements this past school year.

This achievement was made possible through a grant supported by the Genesee Valley Council on the Arts with funds from the New York State Council on the Arts. The grant helped fund the Artist in Residence program, "Story Creation: From Storytelling to Story Text." For six weeks, storyteller Leah Ruekberg met with the third grade classes to walk them through the process of story creation.

Ms. Leah, as the students called her, began each session by telling a story to the entire grade level to model story structure, evoke memories, and to engage students in language. Throughout the six-week process students used telling boards to write about a surprising, scary, or funny memory, then re-told their memory several times to evoke more details, which eventually led to story writing. They used computers to type their stories on special glossy paper, and drew their own illustrations.

The end product was a hard cover book written and illustrated by each student. The cover had a title the student came up with along with a photo of the student and an illustration. Inside, students were allowed to dedicate their book to someone special. On June 24, third graders hosted an author's tea so they could share their books with parents and other special visitors. Before students shared their stories, Ms. Leah explained to the visitors the hard work that went into making the books.

4 "It takes them (students) through quite a process of self discovery," she told visitors.

The books ranged from funny stories about misbehaving pets to scary stories about eye surgery. Students had nervous jitters, but were quite proud of their hard work by the end of the party.

Kindergarteners Discover Adventures at Museum

This spring kindergartners had a day filled with fun, adventure, and discovery at the Strong Museum of Play. While at the museum students visited the Reading Adventure Land where they explored landscapes inspired by children's books. They got silly in the Upside-Down Nonsense House playing with words and rhymes. In Adventure Island students explored a shipwreck and caves. There was a Wegmans kid market, which the students could run as their own business. The students also enjoyed the new Berenstain Bears Exhibit based on the children's books. To top it all off, the students had a chance to ride the carousel!

Students Paige and Jasmine show off the hats they made at Strong Museum.
