

The themes of abduction and alienation appear in several forms in Close Encounters of the Third Kind. Does the movie suggest that abduction or alienation are opportunities rather than problems? Whichever notion you support, explain also whether that notion satisfies you.

That is, if the movie suggests that alienation or abduction are problems, do you think that that is true in your world also?

Or, if the movie suggests that alienation or abduction are opportunities, do you think that that is true in your world?