

Creative Writing
November Daily Writing Prompts

Directions: From now on, you must write daily. You can use the prompt provided for you for each day, or create your own. Remember to write the date and prompt (or topic) at the top of each page. Start a new page for each day. Your daily writing entries must be at least one paragraph in length. Have fun with these! Write from multiple perspectives and play with language. If you have questions about the content of your writing or the approach you want to take, please come see me! Happy writing!

November 13: "The window had other views."

November 14: Remember an afternoon.

November 15: Write about what's obvious.

November 16: Write about the last night of _____.

November 17: Write of something done in a small moment.

Weekend assignment: Choose one of the following:

There were the reasons to stay.

OR

Write about being lost along the way.

November 20: Write about the booth in the corner.

November 21: Returning takes too long.

November 22-24: Choose one:

Write about a hesitation.

Write about being underwater.

Write about opening a gift.

Weekend assignment: Choose one of the following:

Write about the fault line.

OR

This is what was left when he was gone.

November 27: Write about a sudden storm.

November 28: One Saturday night...

November 29: Write about avenues of escape.

November 30: A woman named _____.